Randy Scott Puts College Learnin' To Work In Film

Randolph Scott's engineering training in college came in handy recently when the star was cast in "Carson City."

Scott found himself handling drawing boards, rock drills and transits as a railroad construction engineer in the action-drama, with Lucille Norman as his feminine lead.

Before he hit the grease paint trail, the actor studied engineering and mechanics at the University of North Carolina. However, he never got to practice the profession actively. A short while after graduation he came to Hollywood, decided to become an actor and began studying dramatics at a local little theatre. Today he is one of the ten top box office attractions in the country.

Scott revealed his early background in the engineering field when he told director Andre De Toth that a technical adviser wasn't needed to teach him how to handle the "tools of the trade" for his film portrayal.

"Almost everything an actor learns outside his thespic profession," commented Scott later, "becomes useful at some time in his career to help him create a more realistic characterization."

Back In The Saddle

Gordon MacRae, who hasn't been on a horse since his second motion picture role in "Return of the Frontiersman," is back on one. Actor is in the saddle for his role of El Khobar in "The Desert Song."

Nearly $3 Millions Of Railroad Props In Swanson Picture

An estimated $3,000,000 worth of railroad equipment was used as props to film

"3 for Bedroom C," starring Gloria Swanson.

Most of the picture's action takes place aboard a Pullman car of the crack Super Chief. To cooperate, the Santa Fe Railway Company loaned for exterior shooting a passenger Diesel engine, four new Pullman cars and a freight Diesel, a combined value of more than $2,000,000.

In addition, a complete Pullman car interior, a dome car and a diner, which totaled another $735,000, were transported and installed on studio sound stages to serve as sets.

Wayne All In Favor Of Island Custom

"When in Hawaii, do as the Hawaiians do" is a saying that has its points. So John Wayne, currently on the Islands to film "Big Jim McLain," found out when he learned that it's an old Hawaiian custom to bestow kisses with flower leis.

Last week a beautiful Polynesian girl did a native hula dance at a luau in honor of the film company's arrival. When the dancer finished, Wayne slipped the traditional flower garland about her neck—and gave her a sound kiss.

Mayo Gets Dressy Award

Representatives of Reveille, leading London weekly magazine, gifted a specially designed British-made dress to Virginia Mayo on the set of "The Iron Mistress." The presentation was made to Miss Mayo as one of the most popular stars with English film fans.

Film Art Director Has Designs On Hawaii Home

The early explorers had nothing on Hollywood movie technicians when it comes to introducing new wrinkles to the Hawaiian Islands.

Al Ybarra, art director on "Big Jim McLain," designed a lanai (porch to mainlanders) to tack onto the home of Rudy Tongg, wealthy Hawaiian business man, whose estate is being used as a setting. The lanai was supposed to be a temporary addition, but when Mr. Tongg saw the plans—a combination of Hawaiian and Hollywood motif—he asked that it be made a permanent part of his home.

So now Ybarra can add to his accomplishments the introduction of Hollywood architecture to Hawaii.

Wilde Peps Up Real Estate Mart

Cornel Wilde has another busy chore now that he has completed his starring role in "Top Secret." He is hunting for no less than three houses. And at once.

First he wants to buy a Beverly Hills home to supplant his present rented place. Second, he is looking for a small summer cottage on the Pacific seacoast for himself and family.

He also will search for a desert retreat, where he can work on the several scripts he plans to star in and produce independently.

Star Relives Past In Scene For Baseball Picture

In Galesburg, Ill., where he lived during part of his boyhood, he was the pitcher on a baseball team.

Now portraying baseball's immortal Grover Cleveland Alexander in "The Winning Team," in which he co-stars with Doris Day and Frank Lovejoy, he is once again the pitcher for a Galesburg baseball team.

It was on the Galesburg team of the Three-I League that the professional career of Alex the Great was launched. He was paid $100 a month. Reagan pitched for nothing and provided his own uniform. He was 13.

Bracken Steps Out Of Cradle To Sing

Eddie Bracken, starring in Technicolor musical "About Face," revealed to co-stars Gordon MacRae and Dick Wesson that he first trod the boards as a singer at the age of 3.

It happened when Father Smith at Our Lady of Mount Carmel School in his native Astoria, L. I., heard him sing and, against Bracken's protests, commandeered him for a school festival. Once he heard the golden ring of applause, Eddie says, he junked all ideas of becoming a cowboy or a railroad engineer and decided to spend his life being applauded.

Tunes Up Amateur Movie

Steve Cochran will have an original musical score for "The Embarcadero," the home movie he is directing. Howard Jackson, prominent musical director, will write the score. Cochran plans to complete the amateur film before reporting to Warner Bros. for his role in "The Desert Song."
